change

Change and progress are not accidents, but essential components of life. The systems that fail are those that rely upon permanence rather than growth, development, and progress. Some changes are regarded with either indifference or disdain because they bring alterations and variations that are thought of as unnecessary annoyances in our lifestyles . . .

Yet, it has been change that has resulted in progress. Changes in society have preceded reforms in government and world affairs. Changes are inevitable in a progressive country; changes are necessary.

During the 1973-74 year, we were involved in change. Cranes and steel balls tore down buildings that had previously stood for centuries, we shared the burden of waking up in what seemed to be the middle of the night...

In retrospect, the turbulent era of the 60's left us no option but to regard government as fallible. Watergate again caused us to question leaders and leadership, and we became increasingly skeptical. We no longer remained passive bystanders; instead we took the active role of leadership and we questioned.

Physical changes within our own system made this academic year different from any other year. A few new courses, new buildings, new people, new teachers, and the use of computers were all visible reforms . . .

Although it is probable that these innovations will all eventually become obsolete, the abstract changes made beneath the surface of the physical ones will have a more permanent effect on the school and the individuals within. We were able to use more sheltered space in which to bring together academic growth and new ideas for development and change.

The Student Faculty Administration Advisory Board was originally founded to reform and abolish obsolete rules and to maintain an official channel of communication among students, faculty, and administrators. The board consists of one sophomore, two juniors, two seniors, five teachers, and five administrators. Unfortunately, much of the SFAAB's potential was bounded by the limits of bureaucracy, and visible progress was slow.

The first meeting was called to order on October 25, 1973, by Mr. Philip Darragh. Marie Cocco was elected chairwoman, the first student ever to head the SFAAB Motions were made in favor of researching, creative assemblies, state laws regarding gym classes with the possibility that gym class become an elective, and the potential formation of a student council to replace the SFAAB.

The second meeting was held on November 29, and the pendulum of change swung toward the liberal direction. It was decided that within this school "Ms." would be more commonly used than "Mrs." or "Miss" to eliminate differentiation of marital status. Exploring sex discrimination in sports and other student activities was also discussed. It was also proposed that gym classes be academically graded subjects.

The December SFAAB meeting was adjourned without ever really being convened because a quorum of twelve was not formed. The board continued to meet on the last Thursday of each month for the remainder of the year. Suggestions were introduced, committees were formed, and research was done. Even though concrete action was not taken on every issue mentioned during the year, the SFAAB represented a mode for a free interchange of thought from all branches of the school community.

Yearbooks are history books, anthologies of events for specific periods of time in specific places. This year, the Maldonian, staff focused on Malden High in 1973-74, hopefully avoiding the trap of compiling a book which could pertain to any school in any year. To insure that the contents of the 1974 Maldonian would support the title, significant and drastic changes had to be made in the traditional format. In September the staff understood too well the need to update the overused layout styles and trite, general, copy.

Janet Cremone, editor and Mr. Richard Appleyard, the new advisor, constantly emphasized these goals. By the beginning of October, everyone had memorized Janet's lectures of "Change," "Maldonian," and "You the Staff", so that positive action in the direction of change began to be implemented in every department.

Since change itself was more than relevant, it was adopted as the theme of the yearbook. The secondary focus was on details that differentiated the 1973-74 school year from all other years. The traditionally formal structure of the faculty section was abandoned for a more casual one. Sectionalized coveraged was given to every department, organization, sport, and event through the use of questionaires and journalistic reporting. Student life was emphasized so that the yearbook would be more personal. Local, state and national events were considered. Malden High is part of a bigger world.

Sections of the book were submitted to the publisher by deadlines agreed upon in September but cursed in February. Pictures and pages were numbered accordingly, and the designated code number for Malden High was written at the bottom of each page until it ran through everyone's minds, like a tune, "08650 la . . . la . . . la . . ." Could it really have been 4000 times someone had to write that number.

Although the staff often found themselves under a strain to escape falling into creativity ruts, each deadline was successfully met; sometimes accompanied by sighs of relief. More satisfying than any individual milestones reached during the construction of the yearbook though was the first glimpse of the finished product, the 1974 Maldonian.

Change appeared to be the mode of 1974 at Malden High School. The Blue and Gold is a good example of a veteran organization that has undergone modification.

The first element of change in the Blue and Gold was the appointment of Mr. Thomas Maher as literary advisor. Mr. Maher replaced Mrs. Shirley Lane, who retired last June. Mr. Maher's exuberance with his staff was evident when he commented, "The vibes are really good. A lot of comments I've been getting about the newspaper are really a credit to the hard-working staff. The co-Editors, Karen MacDonald and Kathy Mahoney, are quite capable and do their jobs well. It's a pleasure to work with responsible students."

Step two in the Blue and Gold's transformation, was its staff's exposure to various methods of utilizing the newspaper media more effectively. As an example, five Blue and Gold staff members attended the annual December Workshop, "Exploring the News Media," sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, at the WBZ-TV studio.

News Director Bill Wheatley, a guest speaker from WBZ-TV commented, "News-gathering is a rather involved process. Information comes from word of mouth, press releases, police and fire radios, many wire services, and always just plain hard work!"

The Blue and Gold staff's "just plain hard work" was evident in their conscientious effort to do what every journalist knows is impossible; to compile in each issue, a precise and detailed ongoing history of the year, in an entertaining way.

In 1974, Boojum Rock had a new advisor, Ms. Cynthia Poor. Her view was that the magazine "should be the voice of the student body, or for many students who are willing to share their creative work." To further that end, it became an open publication encouraging any contributions from any source.

Students participating in editing and layout have an opportunity to create a magazine according to their own liking. Boojum Rock is a non-competitive activity and in that sense it can remain loosely structured in order to accommodate the needs of active, creative people who are also involved in other activities. The 1974 Staff sought to publish a representative sample of poetry, fiction, and artwork which would be of interest to the majority of the school.

Nora Chansky edits for final publications.

Robert Langston and Andrew Ryner at a BSU meeting.

Created in 1972, the Black Student Union has now established its own identity in the long list of student organizations at M.H.S.

In September, the introduction of Black Culture as one of the club's major focuses led to planning trips to Jamaica and the Afro-American Cultural Center in New York.

Mrs. Helen Phillips, adviser, was educated in the South and often relayed to the members her personal experiences living and working in a white society.

Fund raising activities were planned in September. Cake sales, tonic sales, and car washes were held in hopes of raising at least $500 for scholarships to be awarded to deserving black students upon graduation.

le cercle français

Le Cercle Francais was composed this year of the French Honor society and French Club. Membership in the French Club was unrestricted, but an A-average was required to be invited into French Honor.

Le Cercle Francais started the year in September with the initiation of its new members. Each new member of the French Club was required to perform a skit or recite a poem in French in order to be initiated. After the initiations, the members treated themselves to French pastries, cookies, and other refreshments.

During the year the French Club held meetings where members learned more about the French language and culture. This year the French Club planned to prepare different varieties of French food, to see several movies in French, and to visit a French restaurant.

As another year rolls by, the Spanish Club continues to charge ahead with its activities. The year was initiated with the performance of Los Cumbianos (at the annual International Fair). A Tertulia was then given for all language clubs and this presented everyone a chance to get together.

In addition to the Pinata Christmas Party, the club became involved in three service projects. They raised money to build a school in Latin America in conjunction with the Peace Corps. They also had a clothing drive for the children at the Rafael Hernandez Bilingual School, and they started an HERMANOS program which involved working directly with Spanish children.

The sponsored the production "Cenicienta" and sold stationery to defer costs. The Literary magazine "Reflecciones Hispanas" was published and really showed creative talent. The year ended with the banquet held at a leading Spanish restaurant.

The Latin Club began this year by getting together with its advisor Ms. Nicholas, and President Shelley Charney. Refreshments were served while outlining future events.

In November the club journeyed to Boston to enjoy Greek cuisine at the Omonia. The girls were serenaded by a singer while the boys were more interested with their dinner.

A Christmas party was held before the vacation. Games were played and food was served.

Later in the year the group planned on visiting the museum of Fine Arts to view ancient Roman relics.

In early September, twenty girls gathered in room 216 for the first meeting of CAM, the Conveximus Ad Meditandum Society. Jane Sasso, president, delivered a warm welcome, and Ms. Lovins, advisor, followed with the customary pep talk. A fudge sale marked CAM's first effort to raise money. In the first week of November, after personal interview of interested girls, 24 new members were admitted. At the first annual CAM-USONA alumni night, held during Christmas Vacation, last year's seniors from both clubs attended, sharing tales of college life. As second quarter marks closed, CAM held a tea to serve as a break for weary teachers slaving over averages and grades. CAM sponsored the Student Faculty basketball game on February 27th, and the proceeds from the game were sent to the March of Dimes. During the spring, the Mother and Daughter banquet and a cookout were scheduled. The success of CAM's busy schedule proved that the enthusiasm CAM displayed at its very first meeting in September remained the club's unwritten motto throughout the year.

Cog is one of Malden High's service organizations. It's a brother group to Cam.

This year, under the supervision of Mr. Freedman, the club is planning its 50th Anniversary Banquet. The Annual David M. Kutz Prize Speaking Contest is also under way. The winner receives a $50.00 savings bond.

The boys also participated in the Cog-Lit football game. They put forth a tremendous effort but unfortunately lost 24 to nothing.

Founded 101 years ago as a literary and debating society, LIT's main objective this year was to restore its former size and importance in Malden High. The year began with a school-wide campaign for new members. On Halloween night, LIT heard tales of the real Dracula at Northeastern University. LIT faced COG for the traditional Thanksgiving football game at Pine Banks, and won, 24-0. Service projects such as a Thanksgiving basket for the underprivileged and ballot-counting for Junior and Senior class elections were important elements in LIT's revival.

LIT hoped to use the local college community and the cultural activities in and around Boston for lectures, play, movies, and musical performances. Dr. Elliot Carlson, adviser, and Rick Mahoney, president, hoped that by expanding the club's membership and diversifying the activities to appeal to most members, LIT could be rebuilt to its former status as a powerful service organization in Malden High.

A few weeks after the school year had begun, when the fall weather still resembled that of summer, Usona called its first meeting. The girls related the adventures of their vacations, modeled their new outfits, and planned the events the club would sponsor with the help of Ms. Barbara Clifford, the club advisor; and Shelley Charney, president.

The Teacher's International Tea was first on the adgenda. Usona prepared various dishes including an Italian, European, American, and Jewish table. Tea and coffee was served along with the famous Usona punch.

In late January, new members were asked to join. For the initiation they each wrote a composition on anything that interested them, and presented the essays to their parents one night in the music room. Afterward refreshments were served in the teacher's lounge.

Later, the girls planned to attend a play in Boston & in the spring, Usona anticipated exciting bike hikes, cookouts, and canoe trips.

Tri-Hi, a dedicated girls' service club, had a large obstacle to overcome this year, since many of its previous members had graduated. Under Jeannine Curley, the new president, Tri-Hi's first project was a campaign for new members, which culminated in an initiation party.

With new drive and enthusiasm, Tri-Hi prepared their annual Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets for needy families.

On January 3, after returning from Christmas vacation, many club members went to the Colonial Theatre in Boston with Adviser, Miss Davin to see a performance of the nostalgic play "Good news."

Tri-Hi, along with Cam, Usona, and FBLA, has traditionally sponsored a Teachers Tea at the end of each quarter, and continued to do so this year. A pleasant diversion from Teaching duties, the Teachers Tea is always a delicious outlet for the "averaging blues."

The Business Club, an extra-curricular supplement to the business course, is a social service club exclusively for students within the course. The club met regularly every month with the general desire, of diversifying their activities and programs. The club sponsored a Christmas teachers tea, attended an art exhibit and hockey game, and held bake sales and candle sales to raise money to support the club's varied interests.

The Future Nurses Club prepares potential nurses to enter the field by exposing them to different aspects of nursing. As volunteers for Bloodmobile drives and the Mother-Baby clinics at Malden Hospital, the members had the opportunity to develop preliminary techniques and get an actual indication of what a career in nursing entails.

Guest lecturers from various nursing schools came to speak to the Club's members to explain application procedures and the requirements and responsibilities of being nursing students.

Every child wants to become an actor or actress when he or she grows up. Such dreams are given recognition in Greenroom, the Malden High dramatic society. In September, the club held its first meeting to organize itself and stir up interest in light drama. On October 30, Greenroom went to Emerson College to see a presentation of a comedy by George Bernard Shaw. After this orientation, the club began auditions for actors for the annual production of "Three One-Act Plays." On February 1, The Leader and Frenzy by Ionsco and The Summer People by Shirley Jackson were performed in Gay Auditorium. In March, Greenroom displayed its prowess in the performance of a one-act play, Eggs, by Ionsco in the Massachusetts Drama Festival. The group also participated in an outdoor arts festival later in the spring.

Memorizing lines was sometimes a chore added on to a long list of other tasks and the thought of appearing on stage evoked nervous excitement. Greenroom set its own goals and achieved them as adviser, Mr. O'Brien, stated them "to produce and see plays, and to have fun."

The unbalanced environment of the earth is an overwhelming problem to which there is no easy answer. To contribute their efforts in seeking an answer, the ECO club first educated its members about the problems by showing movies after school at its regular meetings. This indoctrination was followed through with positive action; a litter campaign was held on February 16 to clear up the South Broadway Park. Recycling drives for paper, glass, and tin cans were also planned. On clear autumn nights the ECO club sponsored an astronomy program where interested students could go to the Perry Observatory, the roof of Malden High, and peer through reflector and refractor telescopes at a "parade of the planets." Unfortunately, most attempts made to sight the comet Kohoutek were futile. Through community involvement and education about the status of the environment, ECO tried to take positive action to promote an interest in ecology on a local level.

The harmony of the Choral Arts classes captivates all passers by, from rock lovers to Beethoven fanatics. Members of the four choruses included in the Choral Art society, the Concert Choir, Chamber Singers, Treble Clef, and the Madrigal Singers came from all programs of study and were grouped according to grade and ability.

Their first event was a Covered-dish Supper held in October. At Christmastime, Choral Arts students inspired holiday spirit as they caroled through the halls of MHS. December was also the month of the Winter Concert. Music of all styles and periods were studied and rehearsed over and over until the group was prepared to perform in public.

The Choral department sponsored their annual exchange trip and concert. This event was the most satisfying of all because students had a chance to travel and observe the styles of other choral groups.

The Spring Concert was a successful climax to the choral season. Many students obtained the experience and refinement they had lacked in the fall.

Director Frank Abrahams felt that, "Part of the educational process must include areas in the artistic domain." The Choral department fulfilled that need, and acted as a vehicle through which students could channel their emotional energy.

Ninety-four members of the band partook in daily seventh period practices, Wednesday night rehearsals and more early Saturday morning sessions before parades and games than anyone likes to remember. The band marched in the Veterans Day and Memorial Day parades, performed at the annual Spring Concert, and performed again for Graduation at the end of the year.

Ms. Donna Merris directed the band with the assistance of the other music department members especially through the frustrating process of learning new marching formations.

Occupying Malden High's third clarinet section of the band were twelve female members absent-mindedly twirling their instruments. These majorettes consisted of seven seniors and five juniors. Seniors were head majorette, Donna Boudrow, drum majorette Annette Antoniou, Michelle Jesi, Teresa Santomango, Susan Swartz, Donna Strasnick, and Debbie White. Juniors were Anna Marie Antoniori, Linda Cannon, Patti Meuse, Anne Mirages, and Mary-Jo McBride.

Beginning in their sophomore year, majorette candidates must attend practice sessions instructed by the head majorette. The girls must also show exceptional behavior, good attitude, musical ability, and the genuine desire to be a majorette. After much work the candidates try out, performing, marching, and twirling routines before judges and an audience. The selected girls are announced at the Annual Band Banquet, and after a few happy tears, they begin discussing the new season awaiting them.

A coveted spot in Malden High which is restricted to an exclusive twelve girls is the position of cheerleader. To be a cheerleader is to share the spotlight of school sports events. Although being on the squad is a lot of fun, it also involves long hours of practice. Unlike other athletic activities with limited seasons, the cheerleading season continues throughout the year. It begins with an adjustment and organization period, followed by practice for football games and rallies, and practice for basketball and hockey games. Even though the season was long and often the girls had to cheer at three games in five days, the rewards for this year's great squad were infinite. Cheerleader Cathy Winslow said, "The twelve girls on the Malden High squad have to work together as a squad. They have problems and arguments, but being a cheerleader is probably one of the nicest things that could happen to a high school girl."

With vivacity characteristic of girls in sweatshirts standing on bleachers, screaming, singing, and throwing confetti, the Pep Club cheered the MHS teams through both tremendous victories and humiliating defeats. The swarm of the blue and gold sweatshirts could be seen at many sporting events through the fall and winter seasons. Many girls in the Pep Club have aspirations of becoming cheerleaders. Attendance at fifteen games is a pre-requisite for trying out for the squad, and this year, as always, a capacity crowd of potential cheerleaders showed up in March for the tryouts. Ms. Gavoorian, the new advisor, brought novel ideas and organization to the club. During pep rallies and games, through hail, sleet, rain, and snow, the Pep Club showed the true Malden spirit and enthusiasm which was lacking in so many other students.

Desperately hoping for moral and athletic victory the Malden High Football team packed their spirit and ability in their suitcases and headed for camp. Preseason training was held at Camp Forest Hills in Groton, New Hampshire, from August 26, to September 1. The relaxed atmosphere boosted the team's morale, and athletic success remained to be seen.

The first six games showed none. Initially the team was at a great disadvantage. The players were relatively small in stature compared to other high school football teams. The average Malden Lineman was 5'11" and weighed 185 pounds, and the average backs stood 5'10" and weighed 170 pounds. There were few returning seniors, the team counted upon its juniors and sophomores for much strength.

In fantastic victories and frustrating defeats, the 1973 Golden Tornadoes probably had more fun than any other team in the league. Coach Paul Finn's endless optimism and unwillingness to be discouraged were mostly responsible for the high level of morale and comradeship the team maintained. Practice sessions were limited to three days a week. To make them a pleasure instead of afternoon torture, comic disgressions like watermelon races and mandatory push ups for being seen with a girlfriend were held.

Co-captains Dan Provitola, Tony Fermano and Bob Paolini team morale officer, were all outstanding players and their solid dedication to the game contributed to the idealism that the coaches and players retained throughout the season. The coaching staff were all young and, except for coaches Racca and Finn, all new.

There are very personal motives for wanting to play football, to be a part of the action. Perhaps it is the challenge of "making the grade," the Saturday afternoon glory, ego-seeking or help in college education. Tom Cunha, whom Coach Finn said exemplified the ideal Malden player, said "I never realized how hard high school football was played until this year. Football teaches you to work hard, and it showed me that you can never get something for nothing."

Being on the football team is one of the most memorable experiences from high school. The object this year was to make it as memorable as possible because, more than anything, high school football is a way of life.

AND THE SEASON DRAGGED ON . . . AND ON . . . AND ON . . .

On September 21, Malden played its first game against Waltham. The two teams were evenly matched in the first half, but the second half caught Malden unaware. Waltham took a victory 16-0. Defeat for Malden in the first game hardly meant that the season was over there were so many games left to win . . . or lose.

Malden was shut out again on September 28, this time by Haverhill. John Mallett's completions that day were the best percentage on record for the season but the Tornados had not recovered from the previous week, because they were romped 28-0.

The third game of the season was against the North Quincy Raiders. During the first half Malden played unusually well. The team grew confident that they would finally break their grim losing streak. Co-Captain Dan Provitola scored the first touchdown and Jeff Sullivan ran an easy thirty yards for the second one. At the beginning of the second half Malden was leading 13-0. But North Quincy began to sweep Malden off the field and won 38-13.

On October 20, Malden played Revere at Macdonald stadium. The Revere powerhouse was too well organized for the Tornados and the home team was shut out 34-0.

The biggest embarrassment of the season occurred on October 27 against the Chelsea Red Devils, who had recently begun to recover from the wreckage of the Chelsea Fire. But the game was not a total loss Bob Paolini rushed fourteen times for one hundred forty yards and he scored both Malden's touchdowns. However, Chelsea won 22-12. Haunted by a seventeen game losing streak, the Tornados went home frustrated and slightly ashamed.

On November 3, Malden defeated Somerville 27-6. Tommy Cunha was the key player scoring two of Malden's touchdowns and preventing Somerville from scoring several times. The day's blustering wind apparently brought with it a change in Malden's fortune. The success was long overdue but ecstatically received. Ordinarily after a game the team had to do calisthenics but this time the team returned hardly dreading the usual burden.

Unfortunately, the wind changed again the following week in a contest with Everett. Malden jumped ahead in the first half when sophomore John Stanasek sent a 15-yard pass to Dan Provitola in the corner of the end zone for the touchdown. The kick missed but Malden was ahead 6-0. Everett rallied in the second half blocking Malden's passing channels. Everett took advantage of the Tornados' errors and won the game 34-6. But one player drew success from the exasperating defeat. As a result of scoring the one Malden touchdown, defensive end and co-captain, Dan Provitola received the prestgious Aliberti Award for the outstanding Malden lineman in the Malden-Everett game.

For Thanksgiving, the 86th annual contest with Medford, was approaching. It was viewed with waivering optimism; the season's record to date had been 1-7 but a miracle was not considered entirely improbable. At half time Medford was ahead 6-0. At the start of the second-half Medford returned the second touchdown scored from the one-yard line for the winning points. Wild ectasy reigned when the Golden Tornadoes defeated their ancient rivals 22-12. Tom Cunha was named most valuable player of the game for both defense and a total rushing of 101 yards. Key plays that helped clinch victory were interceptions by Bob Langston and Don Roach and a fumble victory by Tony Fermano. Medford had hoped to win this game and thus become the first of the two teams ever to win the Thanksgiving game three years in a row. Citizens of Medford were so confident of victory that an elaborate trophy had been made to be awarded to the team that won. Sportsmanship dictated the rules and the trophy was presented to the Tornadoes by Coach Finn, and Mr. Boyle at the Malden High Annual Awards Assembly.

FIELD HOCKEY

Determination, pride, ability and sportswomanship all added up to the successes of the season and the impressive 4-2-1 record of the 1973 Girls Field Hockey Team. The high point of the season was when Malden traveled to Peabody for a rematch with the team they had previously lost to, and defeated them, 3-1. Senior Cynthia Russell scored one goal, and star sophomore Susan Ciccarelli was responsible for the other two. Hope for future success depends upon products of the Junior Varsity Field Hockey Team, which ended its season with a 1-2-1 record. As the season closed, Coach Carol Gavoorain felt the void that the Senior players have left, but nevertheless remained confident that victory would remain a constant in the make-up of the team.

CROSS COUNTRY

Cross Country running is one of the best endurance tests available in competitive sports at Malden High. In spite of the early season injuries, the Harriers had no reason to surrender to adversity.

Senior Captain Howard Rodenhiser and Junior Mark Berman were the top runners for the squad, usually placing high in every event. The Cross Country Team began the season with an ego-shattering defeat by Chelsea but came back and finished the season with an in-league record of 3-4, with two additional losses in out-of-league meets. Coach John O'Brien's spirit, enthusiasm, and "punny" jokes upheld team morale throughout the season.

SOCCER

Initiated this year at Malden High, the Soccer Team began its season on a shaky note, but only because of the handicap of inexperience. On October 14, the team lost its first game to Medford 3-2, with goals by Tom Cronin and Bob Doolin. The next two games were losses to Everett. After these discouraging losses, Malden rebuilt its structure and came back to play its only home game. With goals by Dave Surette and Bob Doolin and incredible goal tending by Tom DiFilippo, Malden defeated Malden Catholic, 2-1.

In the next game, Malden shut out Winthrop, 3-0. Dave Surette scored in the first period with assists by Jim Cunha and Bob Doolin. In the second period, Pasquale Petrangelo scored, assisted by Dave Surette and Tom Cronin. Bob Doolin scored the final goal with assists credited to Dave Surette and Bob Bellavia.

Overtime periods and climactic endings began to be characteristic of both victory and defeat, as the Malden High Soccer Team under Coaches Phil Gormley and Fritz Wales ended its successful first season preparing to enter the Greater Boston League next fall.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

There are students who cannot participate in school sports for a variety of reasons. To provide extracurricular athletics for these students, an intramural basketball program was organized with Mr. John Schlegel at its head. Although there was some uncertainty about the student body's reaction to the program, eighty boys showed up for the first day of intramural sports, and ten teams of eight boys were formed. The winter Intramural program was limited to boys, but additional activities for girls were eventually introduced into the program in the spring.

Linda Trickey, Capt. Terry Santomango.

After a good strong season in 1972-73, Malden High's wrestling team under Coach Phil Gormley greeted its new season enthusiastically and optimistically. Included among these experienced competitors were four returning seniors, co-captains, Mike Monroe and Fred Ribero, along with Don Boyce and "Red Terosian.

The season started off well for the Tornado matmen as they won their first matches. After this, problems arose for the team. Injuries took their toll, and an increasing number of forfeitures due to "over-weight" wrestlers cost the Tornado's valuable points which were then added on to the score of the opposing team.

The Tornados finished the year with a respectable record, but because the losses were clustered toward the end of the season the results were disheartening.

TRACK

After the first meet of the season, it was obvious that first year coach Jim Griffin had put together a great team. The first meet was against Chelsea, on December 26. Competition was tight and the score was close until the Malden relay team finished first and the meet was won, 46-40. Every meet after that was little challenge for Malden's supersquad. Malden demolished all opposition and made it to the top of the GBL. Seven MHS runners competed in the trials for the 57th annual Indoor State Track Meet. Charlie Russell totaled a remarkable 49½ points during the season, but was unable to compete in the State meet. Out of the seven runners entered, co-captain Bob Langston running the 300 miler Mark Berman, and Steve Silva, in the 1000, all qualified for the finals, held on February 16 at Reading High. Malden also entered a relay team of Don Pedulla, Steve Silva, John Ruelle, and Bob Langston.

SWIMMING

This year's M.H.S. Swim Team completed a very successful season finishing as co-champions of the GBL Northern Conference. Led by co-captains, Frank Merenda and Mark Pesanelli, and coached by Jim Whittaker, the team compiled a 6 and 1 league record, losing only to it's perennial adversary, Melrose High. Bad luck in four individual events cost the swim team victory in Melrose. On February 11, eight swimmers were sent to post-season competition to the Eastern Massachusetts Swim Championships to participate in two relays and nine individual events. The swimmers were Frank Merenda, Mark Pesanelli, Ed O'Connor, Ken Pesanelli, Ken Mierzykowski, Al Jacobson, John Ioven, and Chris Grazeau. A medley relay composed of some of these swimmers, in which each boy swam two laps of a different stroke, had been beaten only once in seven GBL confrontations. A freestyle relay, composed of the remaining members, was undefeated. These examples were clearly representative of the team's success this year

Last year's record of five wins and ten losses caused much anxiety among the ranks of the 1974 team. The team wanted to win badly, but they had only one returning varsity starter, captain, Joe Baraszewicz. The highlight of the season was the Malden vs. Quincy game, played at Boston Garden. The score was close, and the players seemed magically transformed by the aura of the famous court. Joe Bartoszewicz was Malden's high scorer, with a total of 16 points.

It was the general opinion of the team that first year coach, Jack Schlegel would have many future champion seasons. Mr. Schlegel's greatest obstacle was his team's inexperience. He succeeded in somewhat conquering the problem, since many junior veterans and promising sophomores would be returning. Captain Joe commented, "Mr. Schlegel is the talent of the team." The coach in turn spoke highly of the 6'3" captain, saying, "Joe is one unselfish ballplayer."

Ken Fulgham a 6'2" junior from Alabama led the Cagers in scoring and was the GBL's primary fear in Malden. Scouts from most of Malden's opponents came to watch "the kid with that good shot."

The number two scorer was sophomore star, John Stanasek, already renown for his football ability. John exhibited his talent on the court through his quick reflexes slipping past his guard to set up another MHS basket.

Malden High's female athletes often find themselves in an awkward position, since they must compete in a field with a stigma attached to it. Most school sports, including basketball, are still considered activities restricted to the male gender.

The 1974 girls' basketball team was led by the effervescent coach, Miss Cherone, Co-captains Cheryl Freker and Nancy Gottschalk once again made it to the Eastern Massachusetts Girls' Basketball Tourney. The girls owed their success mainly to their spirited teamwork; center Anne McBride commented, "We are a team and we play as a team."

The team comraderie was evident both on and off the court. The girls were good friends, and most of them participated in other school sports.

As a result of the team's spirit, enthusiasm, and co-operation, the girls' constant achievement was sure to bring home honor and success for the unsinkable girls' basketball team.

HOCKEY

As in any rough, competitive sport, the functions of a hockey coach constitutes the basic structure for a successful team. Even when defeat for his team is inevitable, a coach must remain an example of spirit and morale for his team to follow. He must be able to objectively analyze strengths and weaknesses of both the home team and the opposition, and choose his strategy accordingly. Hockey coach Bill McCormack, a science teacher at Beebe Jr. High, fulfilled these requirements. After having won thirteen games and tying only once, it was obvious that the Malden High Tornados had, set a precedent for themselves as a well-organized, hard playing, and successful unit. When the team fell into a two-game winless streak, Coach McCormack grew impatient, but realized that there would only be a victory for Malden if the team lived up to its own standards. When the slump was broken the Coach said, "We had to work as hard as we have all season and we did just that."

The record to date had been an unbelievable 13-0-1. On February 1, Quincy defeated Malden with a score of 5-1. Shaken up from the defeat, Malden returned on February 4 for a match with Medford. The home team had previously tied Medford on January 11. Bob Dimeco and Bob Shind had both scored when Medford tied it up in the third period, and the game ended 2-2. The February 4 game gave Malden the chance to break their one-game losing streak. The Medford Mustangs were ahead 3-2 until there were less than two minutes to play remaining in the game. Sophomore Don Roach shot smoothly into the Medford net with a goal that earned a 3-3 tie, and qualified Malden for the Eastern Massachusetts Hockey Tourney. A satisfied Coach McCormack said, "That was the first time in more than a week that the team started to skate and shoot the way it should."

The game with Everett on Monday, February 11, brought Malden's first place record to an incredible 15-1-2. The home team's confidence had been restored in the previous game, and the team's performance against Everett clearly displayed the revival of the easy style so characteristic of the 1974 hockey team. In the first period, Matty Marden scored an unassisted goal to put Malden out in front, 1-0. Less than two minutes later, Dave Surette scored with assists by Bob DiMeco and Bob Gallagher. Everett suffered three penalties to Malden's one, and did not score during the first period. In the second period, Bob DiMeco scored twice and Frank Hanley scored once. Because of goalie Gary DeSousa's three quick saves, Everett still remained scoreless. Two minutes after the start of the third period, three Everett players attacked the Malden net and scored, ending hopes for a shutout. Bob Shind scored two more times for Malden, and Everett also scored twice, but Malden swept the match, 7-3.

With three years of playing experience, seniors constitute a large part of a team's strength. They are expected to be more familiar than junior and sophomore players with the strategies and makeup of opponents' teams, and their judgment is expected to be faultless almost all of the time. Captain and superstar Matty Marden topped the Greater Boston League with the highest scoring mark of 36 goals and 26 assists, for a total of 62 points. As center, he and Dave Surette at left wing and Bob Dimeco at right wing held the record for the League's highest scoring unit, totaling 118 points on 59 goals and 59 assists. Bob Dimeco held the league record for the most assists with a total of twenty-four. As a team, Malden owned the best offensive and defensive records in the GBL, leading with 79 goals and only 39 goals scored by opponents against the home team. Throughout almost the entire season, Malden upheld a proud and impressive record, and the senior superstars were largely responsible for it.

Returning from a two-game winless streak, Malden met North Quincy on Friday night, February 8, at the Boston Arena. The first period of the game was relatively uneventful. North Quincy scored during the second minute of play, but Brian Hitchcock tied it up soon after with an assit by Jeff Sullivan. Malden suffered the first penalty of the game, though, when Matty Marden threw his stick. During the second period, Malden was scoreless, but North Quincy jumped ahead with another goal. One penalty was suffered by each side. In the beginning of the third period, Bob Shind evened it up again by scoring inside the right post after retrieving his own rebound. Less than four minutes later, Matty Marden stole the puck from one of the GBL's best defensemen faked left, and shot a neatly cut backhander into the North Quincy net for the winning goal as the game ended, 3-2.

English is one subject that allows a student to express his individuality. To meet this need, the English department this year developed the curriculum to offer a diversity in course options. New electives were offered to Seniors, including Existing and Living, Science Fiction, Literature of Crime, The Satirist, Contemporary Writing, Sports Literature, From 9 to 99 — the Life Cycle, Who Am I, Person or Puppet, Sounds of Silence as well as Business English, and Practical English, Film Making and Media, Creative Writing, and Theatre Arts. In standard English classes for Sophomores and Juniors, students were grouped homogeneously according to ability.

Many students have serious reading or writing deficiencies. The elimination of these difficulties was emphasized in the general teaching and learning processes. In addition to the six standard levels of English instruction at each grade, some classes were geared specifically toward students with these deficiencies.

English teachers served as advisors to three school publications, the Blue and Gold, Boojum Rock, and the Maldonian. New movies and books were used this year to stimulate discussion and writing motivation, as well as the students' enjoyment in digressions from routine English class classroom structure.

A "Humanistic Attitude" in the classroom, one of his favorite themes was expressed by Mr. John Hussey, co-chairman of the department, when he said, "We are not forgetting the old skills but in addition to these we have added a new, vibrant and enthusiastic approach to English."

LANGUAGES

Under the supervision of Mr. McCann, Language Department offerings were expanded to give the students a better perspective of the people, customs, and culture of various countries.

French instruction was divided into two basic sections. One exposed the student to literary classics such, as Le Petit Prince and L'Etranger. Along with these the classes were encouraged to attend French plays and films shown in and around Greater Boston. The Senior class went as a group to see a live performance of Moliere's L' Avare.

Another approach to French instruction was more concerned with oral skills than with writing, it gave a general survey of everyday French. Usually once a week the class would participate in "culture day", when a student would present a report on some aspect of French life or civilization, he felt was interesting.

Latin class focused on translating, sometimes with difficulty, Cicero's orations and struggling with Indirect Statement. Modern Greece and Italy were considered in slides and film and to "sweeten class a bit," delicious Greek pastries were passed around.

Spanish instruction focused on oral skills and followed the same pattern as A.L.M. French classes. However, Spanish classes seemed less formal than comparative French classes, although many of the same techniques were used. On "culture days", students usually brought in their own attempts at Spanish and Mexican cuisine, sometimes to the detriment of their fellow students' digestive systems. Christmas saw the appearance of hand made cards (in Spanish of course) outside language class rooms.

German found the students involved in translating the views of young people caught in war. The musical works of the great German composers were illustrated in recordings and tapes.

SOCIAL STUDIES

The Social Studies Department introduced two new courses this year, Exploring Human Nature, and Child Development. These, like Psychology which was introduced last year, included scientific and occupational preparation for the student. The coordinators of these courses would like to see a laboratory situation set up in the future where students will be able to practice classroom theories in a Day Care Center.

The Pioneer semester courses completed their second successful year. Four courses were offered, Government and Politics, Search for Peace, Latin America and Sociology, each with half a unit of credit. Students who opted for these courses elected one per semester. Students were allowed to elect another course but only as a fifth subject.

A large portion of the efforts of the Social Studies Department is devoted to U.S. History, a required course which students usually select as Juniors. This year the Department attempted a new team-teaching approach to U.S. History. Four teachers, Mr. Angelo, Mrs. Brickley, Mr. Indeck, and Mrs. Kahn were active in this new program, which involved some 500 students. Each teacher taught a section at a time with one particular group. In this way the students grouped heterogeneously, could get an overview of the subject as they benefited from diversified opinions and teaching methods. One of the purposes of Team Teaching was to combat the boredom and apathy that usually accompanies "required" courses.

Another program, U.S. History Honors, moved through its second year with success. This course was developed for those students who enjoy history and wish to dig deeper than names, dates, and places. These classes, held mainly on a discussion level, involve the questions of why, how, and what led up to it, as opposed to who, what when and where.

"We work for the students of Malden High. It is for them that we are here," stated Mr. Carmine Belmonte, director of Occupational Education.

There is evident pride taken by those of the Occupational Education Department in the progress they have made in establishing a system of academic study synchronized with vocational training. The Word-Study program allows students to maintain jobs and complete high school as well. "We try to get the student a job that will please him as well as teach him," explained Mr. Belmonte. "There is no substitute for the experience he'll gain from our program."

The Nurse Assistant program is also sponsored by the Occupational Education Department using the facilities of the Malden Hospital and McFadden Manor. It's prime objective is to prepare the student to become a skilled nurse assistant. She receives education and experience in the basic principles and procedures used in giving patients nursing care.

Programs like the Nurse Assistant Course and Work Study give the student time to decide whether or not the job he's picked is right for him. If a student is dissatisfied with his work/school schedule a counselor is always available in the Occ-Ed Office to resolve difficulties.

The program is by no means an opportunity to leave school at 11:15, and enjoy a leisurely afternoon. In addition to four, required subject classes, the work-study student must also have a job. Attending school can be a sheltered life. One is among one's peers and knows what is expected from him.

Work study students must contend with the business world and bear pressures often greater than those of academic nature. They also have to maintain a place among their school friends even though they aren't always available after-school for social activity or sports.

Webster defines mathematics as "the science that treats the measurement, properties, and relations of quantities, including arithmetic, geometry, algebra, etc." This may be true, but for the students at Malden High it has come to mean much more.

This year, a new department head, Dr. George Holland brought fresh ideas and enthusiasm as supervisor of the Math Department. Each traditional course was reviewed and revised.

In Business and Applied Mathematics students learned the fundamentals of markets and percentages, which will be essential in future vocations employing math techniques.

The college course approached the more abstract subjects of Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry, and Calculus. These were to serve as bases for the sciences and subjects the students will later encounter.

Next year Dr. Holland plans to introduce several new courses. One will be geared toward helping students who feel uncomfortable with math, while others will explore the evergrowing field of computer science, probability, and statistics.

A new club which will serve as a "math workshop" is also in the near future. Interested pupils will be able to work on projects and problems that they find intriguing.

Those who have felt that conventional math is boring, will hopefully be enlightened by this year's new outlooks.

The Science Department is a system, a succession from fundamental studies to the most advanced, constructed from past knowledge and experience. The sciences offered at Malden High ranging from Introductory Physical Science to second year Biology and Chemistry, are geared to all levels of student interest and ability. Science is required in the Sophomore year, and those who took Biology in the ninth grade must take Introductory Physical Science, a basic preview of chemistry. Approximately fifty sophomores are selected and given the opportunity to take chemistry. The Sophomore chemistry classes this year were less apathetic about the course than some of the Junior and Senior chemistry classes, since they were more concerned with maintaining an accelerated pace of study rather than fulfilling a requirement. Biology I is offered to Sophomores who had not taken it in the ninth grade. Like chemistry, it focused on learning techniques including films, lectures, discussions, and laboratory work.

Juniors were offered Physics, Chemistry I, or Keys to Chemistry, according to their backgrounds in sciences as well as aptitude and choice. Physics, was concerned with developing logical, analytical, thinking processes in students who would seriously be considering some aspect of science as a career. In addition to Chemistry I, "Keys to Chemistry" a less accelerated version of the subject, was introduced this year. Almost all classwork was done in the lab, and focused on the fundamentals of chemistry.

Advanced sciences were offered to seniors for students who wanted to do independent work in accelerated courses. Chemistry II was a review of Chemistry I and continued extensive study of the subject. Biology II was also an independent variation of Biology I.

Aside from the traditional courses of Typing and Stenography, the Business Department, under Mr. Joseph Sacco, has extended its curriculum by introducing Record Keeping, Key Punching, and Legal Secretarial courses. On January 2, 1974, the first phase of the new course system began. Business Machines students started a six-week course in Key Punch Operation. Classes are held at the Tech-Age Business School, and are taught by Mr. John Roebuck. Along with this course, Record Keeping, taught by Mr. Edwards and Legal Secretary by Ms. Gavoorian, were implemented to enable the student to fulfill expanded occupational opportunities. Other, conventional Business courses are invaluable to both those who wish to enter directly into the business world, and those intending to further their formal education. Typing and Stenography aid in taking notes and the preparation of term papers for those college bound students. They are also essential in procuring any type of office job. Although the faces change, the objectives of Business courses such as Bookkeeping and Business Principles remain the same.

ART AND MUSIC

Roy Hendrickson, Art

Mary Downes, Art

Art and music are two of the best media for creative individual expression in education and opportunities for a student to expand his own interests to new and unfamiliar fields. Each portrait, sketch, or painting done in the art room amid the "unconfines" of the fourth floor, whether it is done in oils, acrylics, watercolors or tempera, is charged with a unique emotional enthusiasm never to be exactly repeated by another individual.

The Art Department, expanded this year to include more extracurricular activities through the formation of an art club, for the benefit of the students not taking Art 1, 2, 3, or Fine Arts, who wanted to take advantage of opportunities for free expression.

The Music Department also offered itself as a vehicle for emotional expression and a learning experience. The Department focused on musical skills as well as what Music Director Miss Donna Merris termed "Social growth . . . an integral part of the music program."

During the fall, the Band kept up Malden's spirit on the bleachers every Saturday, even though their lips often froze to their mouth pieces. They marched in the Veteran's Day and Memorial Day Parades, participated in the annual Exchange Concert program, and Spring Concert, and performed at Graduation at the end of the year.

The Orchestra did not leave school as often as the Band did but its members delved more deeply into relatively classical music.

The Concert Choir, Chamber Singers, Treble Clef, and Madrigal Singers studied music of all styles and periods, from Baroque to Modern. In December, the Choral Art Society performed in a Winter concert and caroled in the halls the day before Christmas vacation. The next performances were the annual exchange trip and concert in March, and the Spring Concert in May.

Malden High with its hectic seven period day allows two periods weekly for Physical-Education classes.

It can be extremely difficult to trot from some obscure location, loaded down with books to the Marshall Gym in four minutes. To have to go to a subject class after the monotony of calisthenics and brief, over-crowded activity is the primary reason for multitudes of Gym Excuse Notes and chronic mis-placement of gym equipment, which plague the Physical-Education Staff.

Mr. William Tighe, Director of Physical Education, realizing the student body's dis-enchantment with its Phys-Ed program is responsible for 1974's modification of Physical-Education Classes.

The first change in the usual Gym curriculum was the removal of the impersonal aspects of phys-ed. In the girls gym classes, long uniform lines of participating students were replaced by small groups assigned unique activities, such as ping pong, badminton, or volleyball.

The boy's gym classes directed their efforts toward the development of the individual body. All boys, fat or thin, tall or short can cultivate physical talent in one of a myriad of athletic possibilities. Wrestling was a favorite of most of the boys, since it required thought as well as strength.

Mr. Tighe invited Mr. Burns and Mr. Burnett of the Medford Judo School to give demonstrations in Karate and Judo to gym classes during the week of December 3.

The purpose of their visit was to introduce the art of self-defense to the girls' gym classes. All the teachers were pleased with the way classes responded to the demonstrations.

If most of the students came to realize that Physical Education could be a learning experience, Director Tighe's immediate goals would be well realized.

GUIDANCE

Individuality is not a new word in guidance work but it was the theme of many structual innovations in the Guidance Department this year. In the new house system counselors will continue to move with the class through the three years from Sophomore to Senior. For the same reasons counseling offices were located as much as possible closer to the homerooms and classes of the students they served.

Sophomore counselors, Miss Demeo, Miss Crowley, and Mr. Evangelista mainly concerned themselves with the long process of orientation to school and counseling. The first encounter between student and guidance counselor hopefully provided the basis for a successful relationship between adult and adolescent, a noteworthy occurance in today's society. Another important task the Sophomore counselors were confronted with was that of aiding the students in selecting courses, since the Sophomore year is not too early for students to begin considering post-graduate plans and aspirations.

Junior guidance counselors Miss Davis, and Mr. Rossino had an extra heavy workload this year since there were only two guidance counselors for the entire Junior Class.

The Senior year was the busiest for students and counselors alike. Mrs. Silver, Mr. Mondor, and Mr. Drey tried to help seniors through one of the most decisive years of their lives. For business students the decision seemed almost vital; many of them would be choosing lifelong careers.

For college-bound students the year was one of applications, SAT's, acceptances, rejections, and wishfully scholarships.

Located on the fourth floor in room 405 is what is known as the Special Needs Resource Room. Staffed by a full-time teacher,Mr. Christopher Berry, teachers' aides from Northeastern University, and a school social worker, Mr. Albert Schofield, the room and the people involved offer a wide variety of services to those students who, like its title, have special needs. These services range from just a quiet place to study, to getting concentrated help in an area of study the student might be having trouble with, to counseling services for students who just feel overwhelmed by the hassles one might encounter in every day life.

The services are available to anyone in the high school and those who might have left high school for one reason or another. The goal of the Special Needs Resource Room is to help those people who for many reasons might find it difficult to graduate from Malden High and take full advantage of the benefits of a high school education.

What does it mean to be a Senior? It means you can be things that Sophomores and Juniors can't. You can be a head-cheerleader, or a yearbook editor, or captain of a sports team. It means you can walk around with a smile on your face. It is a knowing smile, a smile that seems to say, "I'm almost out — finally!"

Being a Senior in 1974 is more than just biding time until May. This year's Seniors had exciting new perspectives and avenues open to them. In the curriculum, required courses, which often restricted sophomore and junior years, gave way to a broad scope of electives. There was Psychology, Calculus, Biology 2, Film Making, Legal Secretarial, Business Machines and more. The English Department offered its own system of electives, for Seniors. The victory parties, dances, and sporting events all took on special meaning for us, because well, this was our year. The year's events followed each other in rapid succession. The kickoff dance, slave auction, and Senior Play all went by so fast it seemed as though they never happened. The warm September air had hardly cooled when the main topic of discussion turned from "the summer" to "the prom." There were arguments, opinions, balloting and reballoting. Finally, we had a theme and a setting. "A Time for Us" — nineteenth century Boston, would be the scene, and suddenly, the fourth floor was filled with egg cartons, soon to be miraculously transformed into cobblestones.

Amid all this uproar, there was serious work going on. There were many trips to Guidance, and many more to the post office. The name of the game for some was college applications, for others technical schools and job hunting.

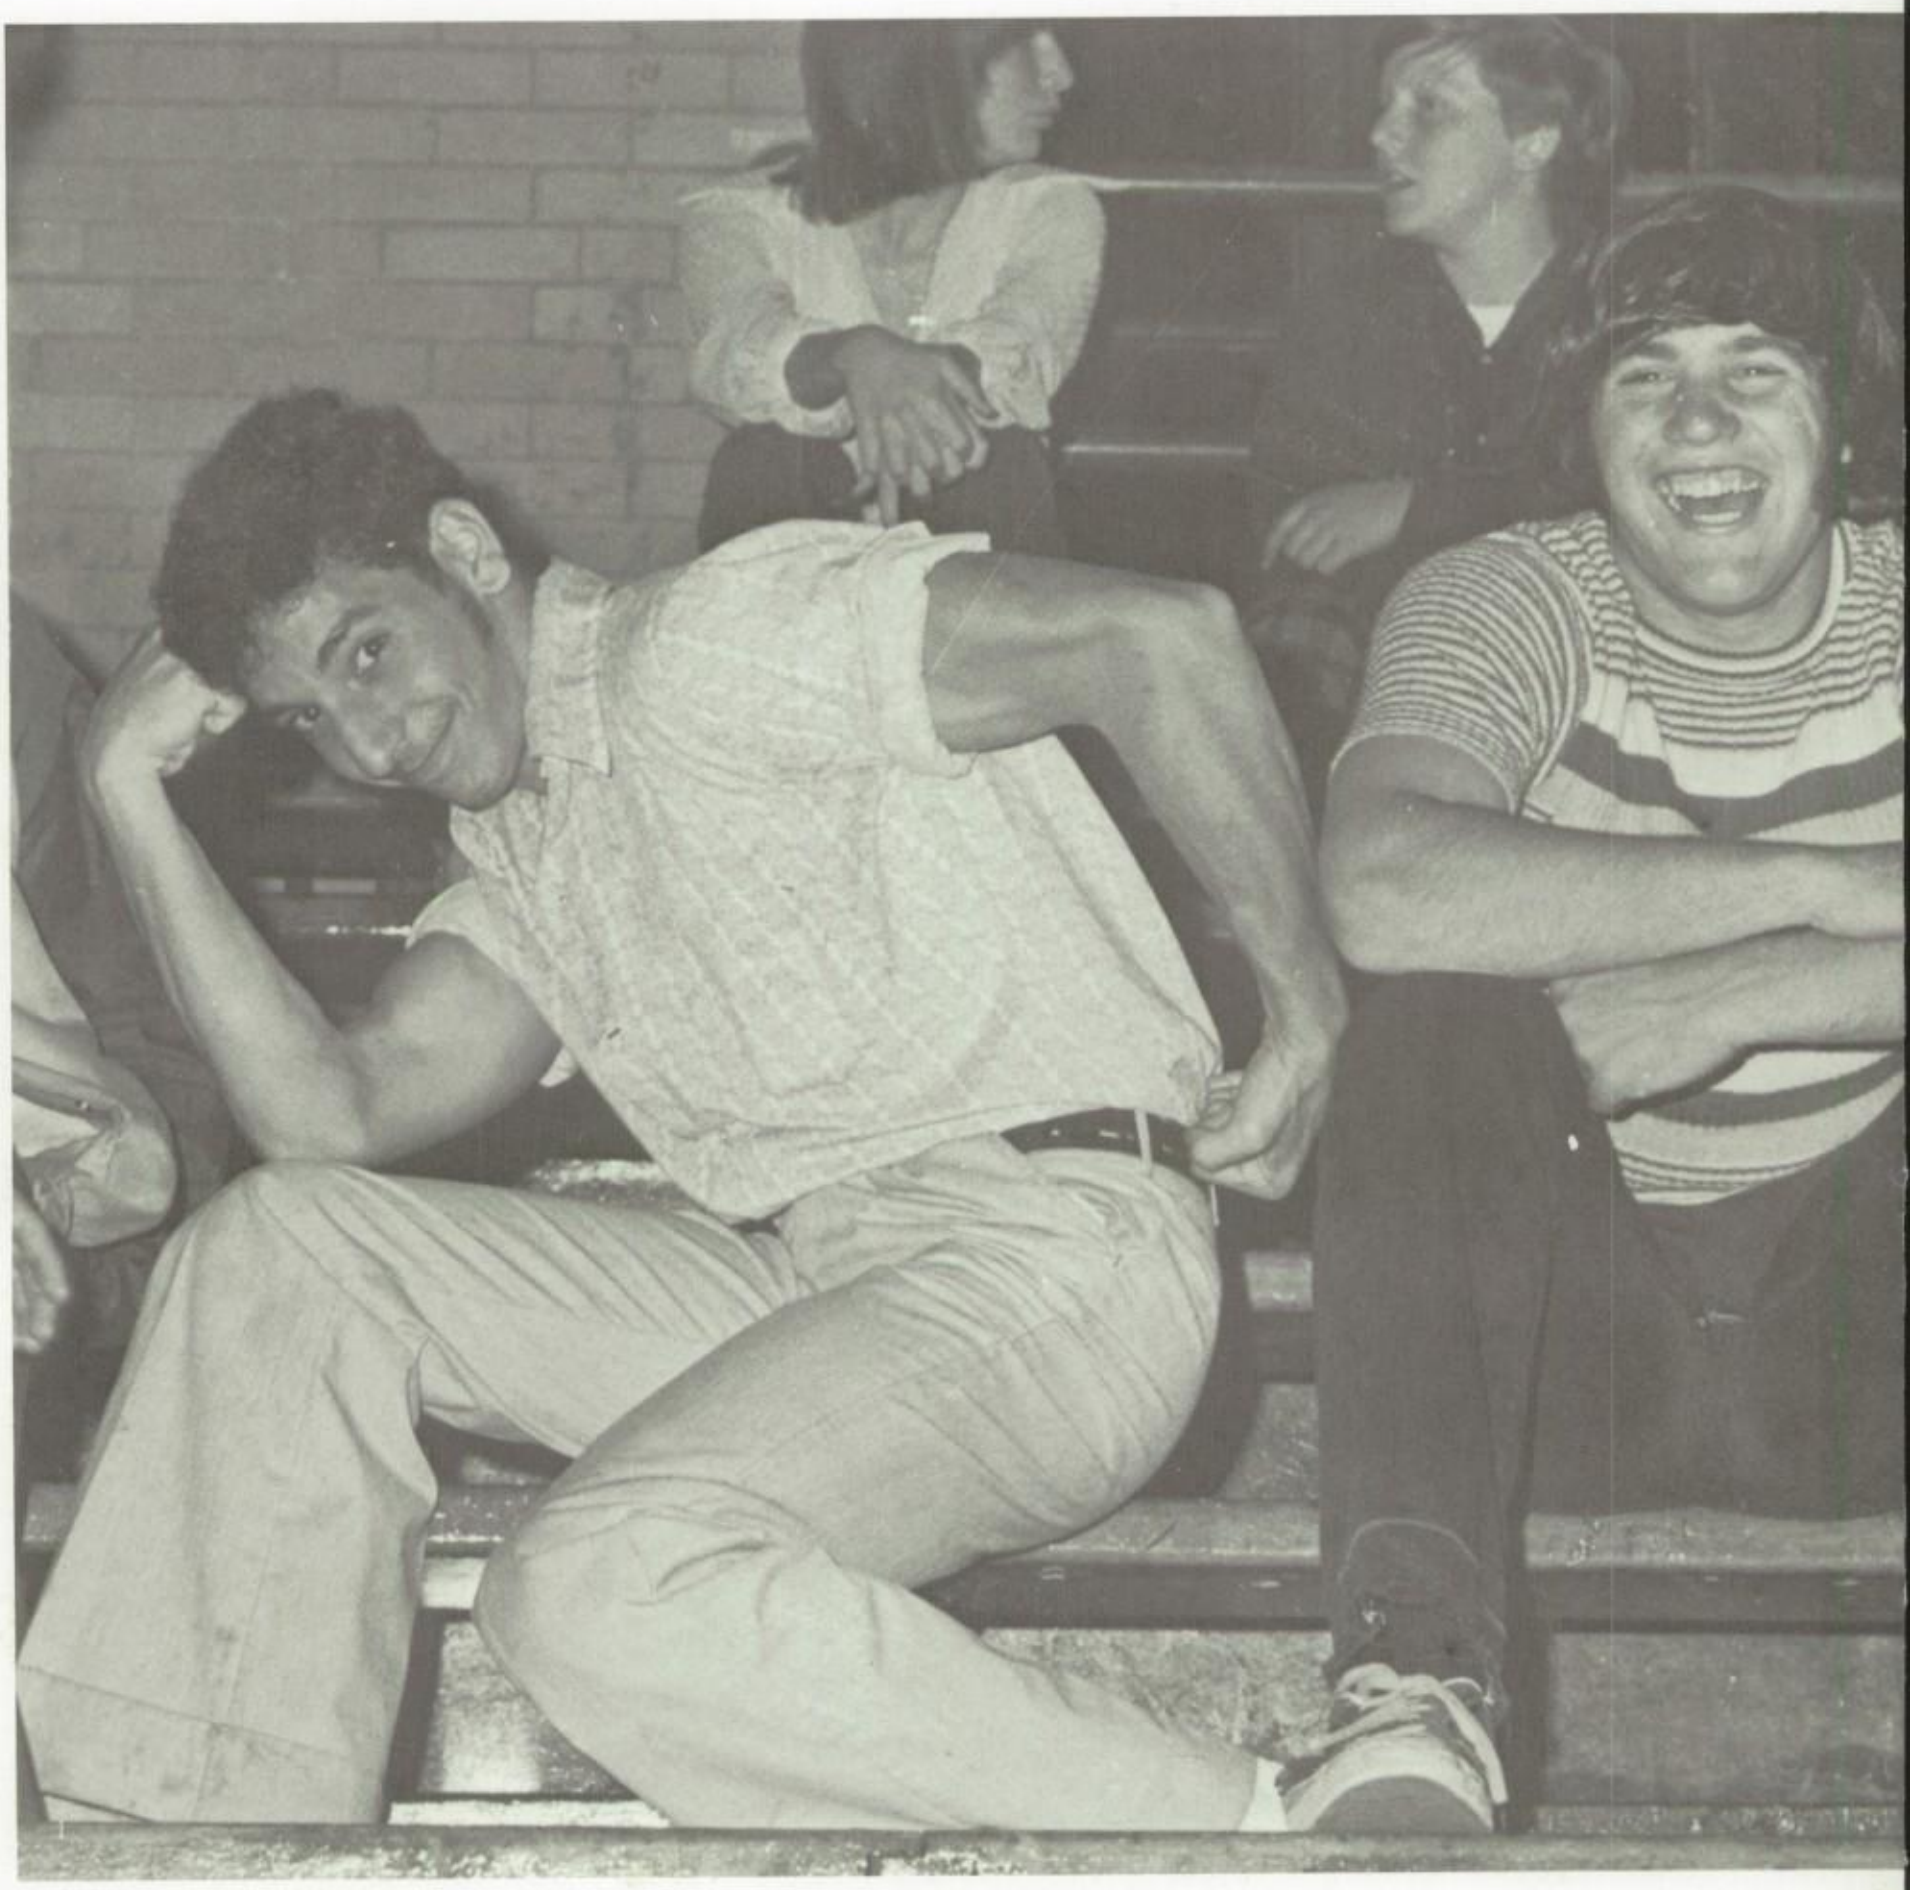
In keeping with Malden High School tradition, the senior class sponsored the annual kick-off dance, which marked the beginning of the school's social season as well as its football season. The dance, which was appropriately entitled FIRST DOWN, was held on September 21, 1973 in the Marshall Gym. (Where else?) Co-Chairmen for the event were Donna Buonopane and Judy Bowdridge. ASYLUM. winner of last year's Battle Of The Bands, provided the hard rock music to which hundreds danced.



FIRST DOWN, although a senior-sponsored event, followed the pattern of most first dances. The major ticket holders were sophomores, who came dressed in their newest, shiniest fall clothes and polished faces, eager to meet the boy or girl of their dreams. The girls, congregated in clusters along the sides of the gym, chattered amoung themselves, and glanced over their shoulders at intervals just to see if they were being watched. The boys, on the othe hand, strutted across the floor, trying to look nonchalant.

On Friday December 7, 1973, the curtain rose to reveal an overstuffed couch, two similar chairs and a braided rug. Minutes later, a crowd was roaring at the antics of the characters onstage. It was The Curious Savage, this year's Senior Class Play, produced (naturally by the senior class) and directed by Mr. John O'Brien. Bea Flammia had the starring role of Mrs. Ethel Savage, the witty but weird matriarch of the Savage family. The cast included Janis Rattet, Burt Matheny, and Bob Dillon as the Savage children. Shelley Charney, Joe Conti, John Hampton, Bev Cohen and Susan Adams portrayed patients at the sanitarium, while Martinez MacNeil was the resident doctor and Audrie Weiner his nurse.

The players raced through three acts of plot, counterplot and other assorted hysterics which included a "cha-cha" line formed by the women, and a dart game which featured Janis Rattet as the Bullseye. advisers

On September 9, 1971, the class of 1974 was introduced to its advisers. They were received not coldly, but skeptically. At that time, no one knew what a class adviser was, but in the three years that followed, we learned.

Class advisers are a dedicated group of people who sacrifice their own time and donate their own special talents and energies in order that the class may learn and grow. To those who worked closely with them, the 1974 class advisers will be remembered for their dedication and individuality. We will remember Mr. Darragh for his calm and knowing approach to every problem, and Ms. Bedine for her creative yet calculating mind. Who will forget Mr. Evangelista's favorite saying, "It's your money", of Mr. Angelo's witticsms. Mr. Alleyne will be remembered as the decorations man. Whether transforming the gym into a football field or a nineteenth century cobblestone plaza, he was there with suggestions and talent. It was Ms. Gavoorian who managed to keep track of two thousand Junior Varieties tickets, and was still selling left over candy three weeks after the show. Mr. DiGiammarino put together hundreds of roast beef sandwiches for the Junior Farewell Dance, and Mr. Busby could always come up with a park bench or a gaslight lamp at a moment's notice.

There is one man who was not mentioned above, and purposely so. He is Mr. Barry Fitzpatrick, Head Adviser to the class of 1974. For three years, Mr. Fitz has thoroughly dedicated himself to our class. If a student was in a jam, he always rushed to find out how he could help. When a daring idea was suggested, he'd shake his head, let out a sigh, and we knew he would go along with it.

It is this man, with his afro, and his moustache, his sheepish Irish grin, his plaid jackets and his red Corvette, who has earned our respect, our admiration, and above all, our gratitude.

JUNIORS

Classes can be either dreamers or do-ers. The latter comes only with a struggle. In September of 1973, the Junior Class had to decide if they wanted to be more than a list of statistics and historical numbers. Yet they had to be sure that they had the ability, strength, and desire to strive for goals they would establish. Although there was some doubt, skepticism, and apathy, a great amount of determination was present in the class.

To be a Junior is to be in a transition between the extremes of Sophomore and Senior. On the first day of school, a Junior is wise and "sophisticated" enough to wear dungarees instead of new clothes suited for November chills rather than September's Indian Summer. He knows the ins and outs of the system, and is secure.

ELECTIONS

In September, election tensions were practically non existent. Four of the six officers were uncontested incumbents from the Sophomore year. Either the class as a whole was satisfied with the work these officers had done in the past, or there was a lack of incentive to campaign. The following officers were elected Bert Cioffi, President; Kim Giampietro, Vice President; Pam Picillo, Secretary; Debi MacNamara, Treasurer; Julie Carbin, Historian; and Denise Lailer, School Committee Representative. The SFAAB Representatives, elected in the spring of 1973, were Arthur Boyle and Patricia Colangeli.

GREAT KIDS

Mr. John Benotti, Class Advisor, felt that "the class is a bunch of basically really great kids." The great enthusiasm he generated at the meetings and assemblies really helped to bring the class together as an optimistic working unit.

Jimmy Fund cans appeared in each homeroom in the beginning of October for a drive conducted by the Junior Class. By the end of the week long collection approximately one hundred seventy dollars had been raised.

During the last two weeks of October green and black letters on yellowed paper boasted a strange and novel slogan, "Witches Brew Tuesday".

HALLOWEEN

Tuesday, October 30, was a warm sunny afternoon spent decorating the Gym with orange and black crepe paper hanging from basketball nets. That night, strange and unknown creatures appeared, the hunchback of Malden High, an oversized baby and even normally attired entertainment seekers.

Scott Fillmore, a member of the class, was involved in a serious accident during the summer. As a result, he was paralyzed from the neck down. He needed a highly mechanized, motorized wheelchair which would cost almost one thousand dollars. To subsidize the fee and present the wheelchair to Scott at Christmas time, the Junior Class held a school-wide fund drive on December 10, and 11. Nine hundred and fifty dollars was raised, an example of optimum students response to meet need and crisis.

With the completion of the fall activities, the class channeled their efforts toward Junior Varieties, the most important annual Junior class event. Vocalists, kicklines, and comedy routines struggled to perfect their acts to be selected first in their categories.

Although the year began on an unsteady note with elections each class event to follow was an even greater success than the previous one had been. The enthusiasm, optimism, and idealism of the class as a unit is sure to make the trend of fantastic achievement continue.

SOPHOMORES

It is traditional for Malden High upperclassmen to survey the incoming Sophomores with an appraising eye and knowing shake of the head.

FIRST DAY

Senior and Junior veterans know well the overwhelming labyrinth of corridors teeming with faceless people moving in conflicting directions. Innocently, a Sophomore proceeds throughout the school following playful advice to assorted non-existing places. Perhaps he is slightly unnerved when a former Sophomore tells him to "go around this corner, continue until you find the elevator. Take the elevator down to the swimming pool, and walk around the pool until you see a door, go through that door, up a flight of stairs, and you will find the room."

Time taught the Sophomores to be wary of their "well-meaning" friends and made them skeptical about their uncertain position for the following three years. In September, the Sophomores were snatched from the sheltered security of their former junior highs and thrown into a vast, unknown high school, where they were little known by anyone except their former ninth grade classmates.

The class of 1976 began to shape itself. Robert Goldstein, president; Mary Kay Hurley, vice president; Diane Medugno, secretary; Jo-Ann Vozzella, treasurer; and Wendy Liederman, SFAAB representative, presided over the class meetings. By a unanimous vote, the class was christened . . . "The Spirit of '76 — The Class Heard 'Round the World." This motto reinforced the Sophomores' spirit and interest in Malden High School.

On November 21, the Sophomore Class appeared for the first time as a single body at the annual Thanksgiving football rally to participate in the "Traditional Yelling Contest." As Ms. McGee phrased it, "wow! If their lungs are any indication of their sincerity . . ." Their spirit was also recognized by the emcee of a school assembly on rock and roll. He remarked, "Most Sophomore Classes make a little noise like "yeh", but this class gives you a blasting "YEH!"

The Class of 1976 had adjusted to high school. Sophomores ran confidently from floor to floor now that they realized that the third floor was not an isolation ward for victims of "Sophomore itis" compliments of "The Spirit of '76." The bright colors and impish pictures brightened the grey, drab December days. The Sophomore Class then went beyond the annual "Good will toward all men", by planning a three year project to become the foster parents of a child over-seas.

This charitable and praise-worthy gesture fullfilled "The spirit of '76 promise to project themselves beyond the walls of Malden High. Though the Sophomores themselves will never see the hope and help they will give to that small child, the satisfaction the class will derive will be beyond monetary value.

The Class of 1976 waits in anticipation of their Junior and Senior Years. They know what they have to work for. The spirit of '76 — girded with a purpose and meaning.

"Best Sound Around"

You're about to take a giant step forward into your future. We think we can make it the bright one you want it to be at New England Telephone. With a job that's every bit as big as your ambition. You see, we need people. With all kinds of talents. And especially, people who really want to get going with their future. And want to be rewarded with automatic raises. If you want a job and a future that's tailored to your talent... along with unusually generous fringe benefits, stop in and see your guidance counselor. Ask when and where you can apply for an interview with the people who want to make your future as happy as you want it to be.

TODAY'S ARMY HAS MORE GOOD JOBS TO FILL THAN ANYBODY

Sergeants Tom Ryan and Larry Povlin would like to extend their congratulations to the 1974 graduation class and to extend this invitation for all Seniors who wil be either looking for a job right after school or one for later in the fall to drop in at our office at 73 Pleasant street in Malden and find out how Today's Army can make job hunting easy.

For starters, we can offer over 300 jobs. And you don't have to worry about experience or training. We'll give you that.

We'll help you get the job you want and where you want to do it and all you have to be is qualified.

And you don't have to quibble about pay. Everyone starts out at $326.20 a month before deducations. How far you go after that pretty much depends on your ability.

You won't be short-changed on fringe benefits either. Free meals, free lodging, free medical and dental care, and 30 days paid vacation are just a few.

If you're looking for a job that's as good as you are, come and see us and find out why;

TODAY'S ARMY WANTS TO JOIN YOU

When we are faced with changes in traditional structures around us, we somehow adapt ourselves to them. We are taught that our leaders are superheroes, but when a Vice President pleads no contest to charges of income tax evasion, we question the integrity of government officials and we become suspicious and skeptical of what used to be ordinary politics. When the economic status of the country weakens, we have to face energy, paper, and gas shortages. The average room temperature is lowered to 68° F, but we have become accustomed to being a little colder at night. Even President Nixon has lowered his thermostat in an act of solidarity with the American people. We have difficulty reading a mimeographed test because, to our surprise, last week's test has been printed on the other side of the paper. We have to get in line for gas at 7:30 AM so that we can sit there with our engines running, eating up gas, for minutes or hours.

We find ourselves at home more often on weekends because closed gas stations have limited our travel. When we do get out, the highway speed limit is reduced to 55 mph. But perhaps it is for the best. We get to know each other better since we are home more often. We walk and ride bicycles more now, and our exercise is not restricted to merely stepping on pedals. Since the speed limit has been lowered, we have seen the highway accident rate drop way down to a record low.

When urban renewal comes to town again, we watch the face of our city transform itself once more. When Route 60 is blocked up to make room for a new city hall and government center, the traffic problems increase. We are annoyed that we have to sit on buses that now must travel stop-and-go traffic on what were once considered to be side streets, and the exhaust fumes from the crowding vehicles make us carsick. But it all becomes a way of life and an accepted routine for us. We adjust our time schedules accordingly, allowing two or three minutes extra to get home from Malden square. The Malden River is no longer a littered, unpleasant sight, and its once unbearable stench is fading. Its banks have been cleared and are now lined with trees and growing shrubbery.

When we return to school in September, we find that our program cards are now computerized, and that all males at M.H.S. have seemingly had sex-transformation operations, because the column headed by the word "sex" lists every student as: F. It is even more disheartening that we are all assigned student numbers listed to the right of our names on the computerized lists. We note these changes as significant losses of identity. We are all of the same sex and we are no longer individuals with our very own names; we are units with our very own numbers. We realize, though, that this modern computerization marks the end of the era of long, tedious work which would plague the faculty and administration for the first few weeks of school. Rather than having to squirm in the gym or auditorium for scheduled study halls during these first weeks, we are immediately assigned more comfortable study classes, for which we are quite grateful. In history and chemistry classes, the monotony of routine is broken up by a new system of team teaching. We can profit from various teachers' knowledge in specialized areas of study, and they can gain experience from working with different students in different courses.

The English department now offers a large diverse selection of electives instead of the traditional drag English courses. We are slightly perturbed that during the last week of school, juniors and sophomores must cram for final exams which will each last for an hour and one half. But study habits are readjusted to meet this new requirement.

This period of transition has not been easy, but we have accepted new challenges and we have adapted and grown with them. We can never stay in the same place; if we do not move forward we will fall backward. We can only grown or regress.
